"DAGO FRANK," "WHITEY LEWIS," "LEFTY LOUIS," AND "GYP THE BLOOD" EXPIRE FOR CRIME.

HINTS AT STATEMENTS

Report Received at Albany Indicates That Men Made Confessions in Death Cells Before Execution at Daybreak.

May Have Confessed. Albany, N. Y., April 13.—The four gunmen who were believed to have confessed before they were executed at Sing Sing prison at daybreak today were "Dago Frank," "Lefty Louis," "Whitely Lewis," and "Gyp the Blood." The four men were executed for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, a prominent New York City attorney.

Ossining, N. Y., April 13.—The four gunmen convicted to die for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, died in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison at the break of dawn this Easter Monday morning. The four men were "Dago Frank," "Lefty Louis," "Whitely Lewis," and "Gyp the Blood."

"Gentlemen," he mumbled as they strapped him in the chair. "I did not shoot Rosenthal," the man who was said to have confessed before the execution, said. "I was with him at the time of the murder, but I did not shoot him."

"Dago Frank," Frank Cirofici, came first. He was followed by "Whitely Lewis," "Lefty Louis," and "Gyp the Blood." The four men were executed for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, a prominent New York City attorney.

In forty minutes all four were dispatched. This time would have been shorter had there not been such a crowd of newspapermen and photographers gathered outside the prison walls.

William E. Cashion, Roman Catholic chaplain of the prison, accompanied "Dago Frank" to the chair. "Whitely Lewis" was accompanied by Rabbi Goldstein of New York City. "Lefty Louis" was accompanied by Rabbi Goldstein of New York City. "Gyp the Blood" was accompanied by Rabbi Goldstein of New York City.

The crime for which the four gunmen paid the death penalty started a wave of police reform, from which the ripples have not yet subsided. Throughout the "revelations" made at the time and subsequently, stalked the "monster" known as the "police system."

Rosenthal was shot down early in the morning of July 16, 1912, in front of the Hotel Metropole, in the heart of the Tenderloin. On receiving an anonymous message, he went into the hotel, he walked out and fell dead before a fusillade of bullets. The murderers leaped into an automobile and escaped. Weeks later, after Becker had been arrested, the gunmen were found in a flat in Brooklyn.

Their confession and Becker's were based chiefly on three go-betweens who turned state's evidence. These men—Jack Rose, Bridget Webber and Harry Vallon—declared that they had hired the gunmen to kill the gambler, Rosenthal, at Becker's request. The confession was a little gambler, corroborated their testimony, and was not adjudged an accomplice.

Becker was a police lieutenant in charge of the "strong arm squad," whose duties were to keep in subjection the gangs of the city and regulate gambling houses and places of ill-fame. Rose, Webber and Vallon said that Becker had made use of his position to collect money from these houses. Rosenthal, according to these same witnesses, having a grievance against Becker, was about to give evidence against Becker to the district attorney.

PRESIDENT FAVORS A FULL SCHEDULE

Congressmen Who Wish Shortened Session Meet Rebuff When Wilson Demands Settling of Trust Reform.

Washington, April 13.—Proposals in congress to curtail the administration trust and legislative program were not regarded today with favor by President Wilson. He said while he had heard it suggested to cut the program short and enact only a trade commission bill, he deemed it necessary to keep faith with the country and carry out the program for commercial trust reform. Mr. Wilson was asked if he believed Congress would dispose of the trust program and other pending questions and get away from Washington by the middle of the summer and he laughingly answered that if an express schedule was in effect instead of a freight schedule there would not be difficulty.

NEW YORK CENSUS REPORT SHOWS MANY NATIONALITIES

New York, April 13.—Gotham's claim to being a real cosmopolitan city was proven and the verdict handed down by the Federal census officials the other day. The evidence was staggeringly conclusive of the charge of cosmopolitanism against New York.

Construction of Hay-Pauncefote Treaty Nothing to Do With Tolls, He Says—Explains Baltimore Platform.

Washington, April 13.—Secretary Bryan in a statement just made public, questions the Panama Canal tolls exemption in the Panama Canal Act, known as the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, but is "simply a refusal on the part of the United States to raise that question in this way." Mr. Bryan discusses various features of the subject—the limiting of debates in the House of Representatives, the Baltimore platform, and the effect of repeal on the treaty. He claims that the opponents of the repeal had seized upon the fact that the president was "surrendering to England." Mr. Bryan declared that the opposition to the repeal had attempted to appeal "to prejudice rather than reason."

JEWIS IN THIS CITY OBSERVE PASSOVER

Annual Custom Is Being Kept By Jews All Over the World.—To Continue for Eight Days.

The Jews in this city as well as the Jews from all over the world are observing the annual Jewish Passover, which began on last Friday evening, and continuing for eight days, closing Saturday night of this week. There are but eight Jews in this city, by accurate count, and they are all observing the Passover. In Beloit and other cities there are enough Jews to warrant meetings being held. Last Friday night Beloit held a meeting, and their holiday party with the Jews in this city are holding services at their own homes, and have extra dishes to fit the occasion. These dishes are leavened bread, which the Jews refrain from eating during the eight days of worship. Just before Moses led the Jews out of Egyptian bondage into the wilderness on their pilgrimage into Canaan, their parents, land of Egypt, was visited by the last of the plagues and the Jews were passed by the plague and their homes not visited by the dread visitor. Through the centuries and this day the Jews all over the world have celebrated the feast of the Passover. During the eight days of the celebration of the Passover Jews do not eat leavened bread. This custom has come down through the years as a result of the act of the Jewish women when the Jews answered the call of Moses and followed him into the wilderness. The Jewish women did not have much time to make ready from their flight from Egypt and these who had bread in preparation for baking were obliged to bake the bread before it became leavened by the yeast. Out of this has arisen the custom of the Jews in eating unleavened bread during the eight days' celebration of the Passover.

GAVE DEDICATION TO NEW WINDOW SUNDAY

Dr. Kidder Holds Ceremony at Regular Morning Church Service—Gift is Most Beautiful.

The new window in the Congregational church, installed about a year ago, by the ladies of the Benevolent Society, at a cost of approximately three hundred dollars, received its dedication yesterday morning at the regular Easter morning worship. The ceremony and prayer was conducted by Rev. S. U. Kidder, pastor of the Congregational church, at which time the entire congregation stood. The choir rendered as the response, "For All the Saints, Who From Their Labors Rest."

Below the window the following inscription is written: "In memory of the ladies of the Benevolent Society in loving tribute to those who have served with fidelity—1850-1912." The following names are written on the tablets on the wall below the window:

KEEPS OUT THE RAIN

Shields at Open Windows Need No Attention in Case of Storm.

In these days when every other person, or even more than one, is a fastidious crank, there is a demand for some system of ventilation which will let in the air and keep out the rain, in case of such a visitation, for no matter how strong the advocate of the device, it can be made to do so badly as to cheer himself out of a daughter is a character which is not to be despised. The shields shown in this accompanying illustration are designed to perform this mission and it can be readily seen how it will be accomplished.

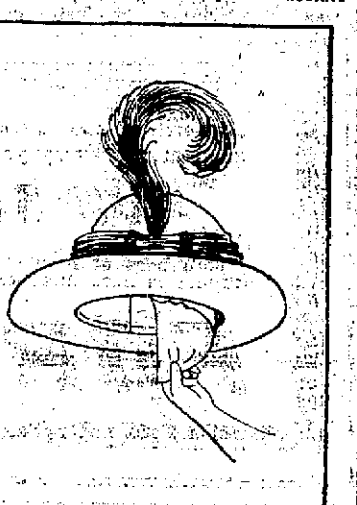

WINDOW SHIELDS KEEP OUT RAIN AND LET IN THE AIR

The shields are designed to be made of any material, although glass is the least objectionable, reinforced with metal presenting a very durable material for the purpose. The shields are removable, secured in place or fixed as may be desired, and where the glass is made use of the sheets are generally secured permanently in place. These devices allow the windows to be opened from the bottom and lowered from the top to any desired degree without the least possibility of the entrance of rain, no matter from what angle it may proceed.

REMOVABLE HAT LINING

lining, and this, too, without the necessity of resorting to the use of sewing a new one in every case of soiling. The new scheme contemplates the use of paper as a hat lining, and a number of these are secured to a frame and sewed in the hat. As the lining is simply torn out and a new one is right there to take its place. When the last one has been torn out there are retained a number of retainers so that a new supply is readily secured in place.

SCIENCE NOTES

A lieutenant of police in Berlin has invented a parachute for aeroplanes which is designed on lines quite different from those which have been heretofore offered. For the parachute surface is operated in connection with the wings of the aeroplane. According to this scheme a large surface of cloth is rolled up and attached to the wings, this being released by a lever or a spring and allowed the flyer to descend to the ground safely.

The extent to which the composition of cow's milk may be altered under the influence of drugs and medicines administered to the animal has been recently demonstrated by some experiments. Two samples of milk were taken from each cow, one before and the other after the administration of the medicine. It was found that all these drugs produce considerable alterations in the chemical composition of the milk, which affect its chief nutritive constituents. The alteration may consist in the loss of the nutritive property, owing to the great decrease in total solids, or may make the milk unsuitable for food, e. g., from an excess of casein rendering it indigestible. Such milk is not hygienic and should not be sold except for special purposes, and under the name "medicinal milk."

Railroad and highway construction in the Indian state of Kashmir is retarded almost prohibitive on account of the loose character of the soil, which is constantly slipping and sliding, at times undermining great houses and causing great loss of life to those employed on the work and being responsible for other serious damage during the work of building and afterward. A 200-mile highway built in government some time ago was attended by innumerable disasters, and is now only maintained at the annual expense of about $500 per mile, which is principally in repairing the damage due to the constant movement of the soil. It is said that the first step in the introduction of railroads in this section, which would be almost impossible under the existing conditions. An attempt in the establishment of an aerial railway which will soon be built over the mountains which separate the celebrated Vale of Kashmir from the Plains of Punjab, will be a very wise system that will be profitable to the country. In the first place it will be 25 miles in length, the longest line of this character which has ever been undertaken and will represent an expenditure of $1,500,000. The spans of the new cable system will be about 300 feet and some of the longest will be 500 feet high. It is expected that freight will be transported and probably passengers from one end to the other in 15 hours, whereas at the present time, 15 days are required for the same distance, and the only way of negotiating it is by bullock cart. The motive power will be electrically generated by a water-power at Rampora.

Gaby Deslys is the "Belle of Bond Street."

Last week's activities ran exclusively to revivals. The Shubert theatre has given over to Gaby Deslys and Sam Bernard, who appeared in a revised edition of "The Girl from Kays" now known as "The Belle of Bond Street."

First honors went to Bernard in his old role of Hagenheimer. He played the part with all the zest that he brought to it in the days when "The Belle of Bond Street" was the "day on Broadway."

Gaby makes a beautiful "Belle" and is proving possession of real histrionic powers. Others in this production are: Philip Lawrence, "The Belle of Bond Street," and "The Belle of Bond Street."

Shubert to Book Pictures.

New company formed with Joseph L. Rhinock as president, will control a list of dramatic and musical plays.

Announcement is made by the Shubert theatrical interests that a new company has been formed to be known as the Shubert Feature Film Booking company. The purpose of the booking motion pictures to be made from a long list of dramatic and musical comedy productions controlled by the Shuberts, W. A. Brady and other dramatic managers. The number of plays thus made available for picture production, approximately about two hundred, many of which are noted successes.

Joseph L. Rhinock is president of the new corporation. Jules Murray, manager, and Lou Weed the booking agent. J. M. Brulature and Ch. Jounson of the Edclair company, are said to be interested in the enterprise.

Work on productions for the new booking agency is now under way at the Edclair studios at Fort Lee, and unfortunately, some of the negatives were destroyed in a fire which occurred at the Edclair factory two weeks ago. But the plans for the new Edclair factory and studio are designed to take care of the large enterprise contemplated in the organization of the Shubert Feature Film Booking company.

How to Write a Moving Picture Play

One of the most absorbing topics of the day is the "moving picture play" and how it is made. Beyond a doubt, at least half of the people who read this newspaper are ambitious to write moving picture plays, or scenarios, as they are commonly called. Most of them are of those who would succeed in this fascinating vocation, are impatient with the rubber stamp of the professional motion picture play-writers.

Following is what can be described as a "moving picture play," giving a few of the more important technical terms used in the movies that should be known to writers of plays.

Business—The detailed action of the actors in the scenes.

Close up—Action taken with the performers, about eight feet from the lens, that being the minimum distance for successful photography.

Continental—An American photo play of the regular service more than thirty days old.

Cut—Ending a scene sharply by a change to a leader or to another scene.

Cut back—The change from one scene to another having to do with the same action, as from one end of a telephone line to another. Also the change to a past scene, such as a memory that comes to an actor's mental vision.

Director—The equivalent of a stage manager in a theatre.

Dissolve—The running of one scene into another by a gradual cutting off of one and sharpening of the other. It is done by running the film twice through the camera; the first time gradually closing the shutter on the first scene and the second time starting with a closed shutter and gradually opening it on the new scene. It is most often used to suggest memories of the past or visions seen by characters in the play. The scenes which are gradually brought on the screen and gradually dissolved away as they end.

Double exposure—Used where the visions are seen by a character in the play or for trick photography as had in which one actor takes two parts in the same scene. In this case again the camera is run twice through the picture, the first time the section of the picture which is to be shown is cut out with a shade over that section of the lens, and the second time to let the vision section in, as permitted by the camera.

One-actor in playing two or more characters are kept in different parts of the scene, one part being photographed on each run and the other part being apparently of.

That tired feeling in the spring. That tired feeling that comes to you in the spring, that it is impure and it also is a sign that your blood is impure. It is a sign that your blood is impure. It is a sign that your blood is impure.

CONSERVATION OF VISION.
City and school life promotes eye-strain. Glasses relieve such eye-strain, but in having them fitted do not let the practitioner use "drops" in your eyes. It is a dangerous practice. Optometrists fit glasses without the use of "Drops."

How to Become a Poet.
The art of writing poetry is very difficult at first, but it becomes easy by practice, says an English writer. The best way for a beginner is to take a line from another poem; then he should construct a line to fit it, then having won his staff, he should strike out the first line (which, of course, does not belong to him) and go ahead. When the poet has written three verses of four lines each, he should run out and find a girl some where, and read it to her.

FEDS START SEASON WITH FUNDS ENOUGH TO OPPOSE TRUST

Baseball Fans Watch Performance of Outlaws in Battle Against Organized Baseball.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

New York, April 13.—They're off to-day, then, the Federal League, and players lured away from the big tent by the glitter of gold and the smile of James A. Gilmore, organized baseball's pet aversion. The Feds cracked their season of 1914, really their first as a league that looks like a real one, at Baltimore today. Buffalo and Baltimore staged the opening encounter and the rest of the league will open up in sections. Brooklyn will open up in sections tomorrow, Thursday, the last bit of the lid will be lifted off and Chicago will meet George St. Louis' aggregation in Kansas City while Indianapolis is engaged at St. Louis.

The Federals are breaking in on their career after the most tumultuous winter in the history of baseball. After rounding up a choice selection of hand-picked millionaires, President Gilmore started after major league players with money. Dollars dropped as Bill Shanks, noted sportswriter of other days, said like a gentle rain from heaven. Only, this shower grew until it became a down-pour and every baseball player who was not under contract hoisted an umbrella and went out to view the clouds. That they found the water fine is evidenced by the fact that ball parks have been constructed and the Feds are starting their pennant scramble today.

The real turning point in the fortunes of the Federals was the signing of Joe Tinker, former Cub shortstop and manager of the Cincinnati Reds. This came after the famous deal whereby Tinker was acquired by Charles Ebbetts of Brooklyn for $25,000. He quibbled over the salary Tinker was to receive, however. As a result of his decision to refuse Joe a few hundred dollars more a season, the Federals graded him and made baseball a fairer game. He cost the American and National Leagues more than a half-million dollars in players who jumped after Tinker, and advances in salaries necessary to hold others in the organized ranks. By sending him to Knebe, the Phillie third baseman, the Feds put over another strong punch and as their purse strings loosened more and more their raid on the big league teams went on with more success. Baseball salaries have been boosted to unheard-of levels as a result of the Fed invasion.

Many former big league stars are in the Federal ranks, but the most prominent men who performed in the big circuit last year and then jumped are Brennan, Doolan, Seaton, Knabe, Walsh and Fineran, of the Phillies; Wilson, Crandall and Hartley, Giants; Moore, Bridwell and Miller, Cubs; Harlan and Quinn, Braves; Evans and Suggs, Cardinals; Brown, Pirates; and Eberhart and Egan, Reds. Ford and Zeider, Yankees; Hendrix and McKee, Pirates; Falkenberg and Knapp, Cleveland Naps. Others have taken the kankaroo route to the Feds as the case of Catcher Killifer of the Phillies, who went to the Feds. Pitchers Flanning and Kahler jumped the Cleveland Naps, but returned to the fold as did Kirkpatrick of Brooklyn. Bill Bradley, manager of the Brooklyn team, was formerly with Cleveland, but has been out of the big show for some time. It was a torrid winter during which the Fed man-mates skated about the country on mysterious missions and talked of money. A strong bluff was made that a team was to be placed in Toronto, but when the showdown came this was found to be only a blind to cover up the operations looking toward the selection of an eighth city. Gilmore came to New York with the big meeting of the National League on and quietly arranged to put a club in Brooklyn while the organized forces were fussing and turning down a proposition to put an International League team there in order to "cover up" the territory.

Charles Weeghman, restaurant owner of Chicago, backing the Fed team in that city, was Gilmore's chief backer and advisor in the negotiations of the winter. Reports of attempts to lure him away by selling him a team in the American or National League were circulated repeatedly during the war months, but Weeghman refused to fall. On one occasion the Feds were reported on the verge of going on the rocks. Weeghman was said to have demanded a showdown that he might know just how much money and how many players other clubs had. If he did make such a demand, he was satisfied and stuck to the ship. With the Wards of Brooklyn, Weeghman and other interests of great wealth back of the League, the success of the new organization now apparently depends only on the grade of baseball the teams produce. Many closely associated with the national game believe the Federals will be taken into organized baseball before another year.

Sport Snap Shots

If Muggsy McGraw goes down before just a few more kinks, wallops he will find that his influence and prestige among his employees on the Giant payroll is fast waning. Whenever a rookie joins the N.Y. bunch he is taught from the first that it is McGraw this and McGraw that. McGraw is king and if they don't like it he's there to hand 'em a smack on the nose and prove it. Jawn has acquired somehow the rep of being a mean little person and on one to mix dukes with. In this way he has always held the love and respect of his players. However, a few more affairs like that Pat Newman, one would think Muggsy's hold on his men. Last summer Ad Brennan of the Quakers walloped Jawn at Philadelphia and put the Giant chief under the explanation that Ad hit him from the rear when he wasn't looking. In this Newman instance he made a similar alibi, but it sounded rather weak. Jawn will have to steer clear of these scenes in the future or else really develop a punch. He must do one or the other or his pennants will become few.

They are saying down east that Frank Chance has developed the foundation of a real ball team. In the few games they have taken part in this season they have shown fast and clever fielding, good hitting and some brilliant pitching. If Frank is able to grab onto a regular star, stick among them some day he will have done something for the Yanks that has never been done before. That is, given 'em a real ball team.

NEW FEDERAL LEAGUE ENTITLED TO RANK AS A MAJOR ORGANIZATION

According to baseball experts, the new Federal League is entitled to be classed among the major organizations. Its players are as classy as are to be found in the American and National leagues. Its pitchers, like Seaton, Hendrix, Earl Moore, Falkenberg and Miner Brown, rank with big league twirlers. And the Feds are technically a major league because they pay unlimited salaries to players who are not subject to drafts.

NOW THEY'RE DANCING LE VALSE OMAR IN LITTLE OLD GOTHAM; IT'S A "HESITATION," BRAND NEW, AND ALSO VERY POPULAR

Characteristic steps of Le Valse Omar.

Le Valse Omar, named after one of the season's theatrical successes, "Omar, the Tentmaker," in which Guy Bates Post appears as the poet who knew so much about the joy of life, is the latest dance that is interesting New York society. Ralph Bunker of the cast, who is most popular among the younger society set, whom he teaches the new steps, invented this, and it promises to be most popular. Le Valse Omar is a "hesitation."

There are many methods of working one's way back to the bushes after climbing to the big show, and one of the best ways is simply eating oneself there. Most all ball players realize this, and the wise boys, especially the experienced stars, are very careful about what they have to eat in the summer season. Most of them go altogether without lunch. As wise big league manager has said: "Show me the player who eats three meals a day and I'll show you one on his way to the bushes." The popular notion that big league players have a swell pick of food on their travels is laughed at merrily by the wise ones, and when they sit down to lunch, if they lunch at all, they order a half dozen wax beans and a tooth pick. Hotel managers don't make a great deal of ball players with voracious food capacities.

George Stalling says that the Maranville-Peters team of midge fielders will be the fastest streak in the National league this season. And no one has hurried forward to dispute the point with George, either.

Muggsy McGraw will have a little competition in one sense this summer. Wilbert Robinson, guiding the Brooklyn Superbas, and Charley Hferzog of the Reds, will both employ McGraw-esque methods in the race next season. Each of these new managers in training his men has given a great deal of attention to base running and sliding. So when either of these two teams is engaged in tussle with the Giants, the fans can expect to see a great deal of action on the bags.

DOES DARING FEATS AT WINTER RESORT

Fredericka A. Hoyt and William J. Connors.

One of the most daring feats performed by a woman at 24th Beach in twenty years was the diving of pretty nineteen-year-old Fredericka A. Hoyt of New York and Philadelphia from the top of the Casino into the pool below, a distance of 118 feet. Only once before in the annals of the resort has a woman accomplished this feat. Miss Hoyt is here shown riding on the handle bars of a bicycle built for one, propelled by young William J. Connors, son of "Fingy" Connors of Buffalo, N. Y.

Thought Window Was a "Movie." At the general assembly of the Presbyterians in Edinburgh, a home mission deputy told this story to illustrate the part the picture theater plays in a modern child's life. A little girl, being taken to church by her mother, viewed a stained-glass window for a minute or two. "Ma," she asked, "what are they going to change the picture?"

MARION WOODS COMPANY
PLAYS TO CROWDED
HOUSES ON SUNDAY

At the Myers Theatre two well filled houses witnessed the initial performance of the Marion Woods Company Sunday matinee and night. In "Kentucky Sue," a play well worth seeing, Miss Orla Marion played the part of Sue and proved herself an actress of ability. The specialties introduced between the acts were of a very pleasing quality. While this is the first appearance of the Marion Woods Co. in Janeville, their work in Kentucky Sue stamped them as favorites right from the start. Miss Marion and Mr. Woods are not unknown to Janeville audiences, having appeared here with the Winning Endorsers Co. and also with other attractions. Their engagement here is for eight nights, with a complete change of play and vaudeville each night. Tomorrow night they present a sparkling comedy "The Detective." Feature pictures will be shown before the play, each night. The theatre patrons are certainly getting the biggest and best show for the money they have had for sometime.

THE APOLLO

For Tuesday and Wednesday the Apollo Theatre announces Marion Leonard in the three part motion picture feature, "In the Watches of the Night." Marion Leonard is one of the "big stars." In this dramatic feature she has wonderful opportunities to display her remarkable talent, and the result is three reels of dramatic action that holds one enthralled through every scene.

The story of this feature deals with the heroic efforts of a young actress who has married a scion of an old family to save the family name from disgrace after her husband has stolen bonds to cover a shortage in the stock market and then committed suicide. The young man's father bitterly opposed to the marriage of his son to "an actress," considering it a disgrace to the family name, and when his boy refuses to listen to his protests he ordered him from his home. The union was a happy one, however, and a charming youngster came to bless the home. But a crisis came. He was weak enough to use some of the firm's money to carry some of his personal Wall street speculations. The result was disastrous. Then when he went to his old father to tell him he was a thief the elder Stockton refused to believe him and insisted that he was only trying to get money to spend on "that woman." The boy, broken in spirit, shot himself. The manner in which his wife (Miss Leonard) arose to the occasion and covered up all traces of the theft and suicide to save the family name from disgrace is dramatic in the extreme. This will be another addition to Miss Leonard's triumphs on the screen. Her work in this powerful drama will make many new friends for this popular photoplay star.

REGIMENTAL COLORS IN PAWN

Odd Experiences of British Emblems Once Greatly Prized by Those Who Carried Them.

The discovery of the long lost colors of the old 50th regiment in the garden of Funtington-house, near, Chichester, is a reminder of the strange fates that have befallen so many of these glorious military emblems. London Tit-Bits remarks. The colors of the 51st foot—since disbanded—were captured by American pirates during the war of independence and hidden away in Ireland; the colors of the 20th regiment were deliberately burnt prior to the surrender at Saratoga to prevent their capture by the enemy.

At Bergen-on-Zoom the Royal Scots, to save their precious colors from falling into French hands, sank them deep in the river, though the enemy later fished them out; and when the second battalion of the 8th foot was disbanded at Portsmouth in 1816 the colors were cut into small pieces and distributed among the officers.

One of the colors of the 1st Northamptonshire regiment, which had been carried right through the peninsular campaign, was discovered some years ago in a pawn broker's shop, though how it got there is a mystery to this day. A similar uncertainty attaches to a pair of old colors of the 2d Border regiment, which were recovered from a London pawn broker, who was offering them for sale, by Lord Archibald Campbell in 1888.

Four years later four colors which had accompanied the Gloucester regiment in Egypt and in the peninsula were recovered from a York pawn broker. It appeared that, having been bequeathed by an old colonel of the regiment to his son, they were ultimately secured by a servant, who, falling on evil times, pawned them for a few shillings.

HERE'S THE OPPORTUNITY FOR OUR SCHOOL CHILDREN TO EARN SOME BIG MONEY

TEN CENTS PER HUNDRED TO BE PAID FOR DEAD FLIES.

DURING APRIL ONLY

Ladies of the Civic League Start Unique Campaign to Rid City of Pest and Disease Carried.

"Swat the fly." Take them to the children's room at the city library Saturday and get ten cents per hundred for the dead ones.

This holds good only during the month of April, when children get busy and earn vacation money by swatting the fly.

One of the most unique campaigns against the fly ever waged in Janesville started this morning. With the organization of the Junior Civic League, composed of children of the Fourth, Sixth and Seventh grades of the city schools, with the slogan "Swat the Fly" as their watchword, the initial step was taken. Now the ladies of the committee of the Civic League having this junior organization in charge, have even gone further.

They offer ten cents per hundred for dead flies delivered at the children's room at the library next Saturday morning. Think what this means? It will result in the death of millions of other flies for every hundred at the same time be an incentive to the youthful workers to do their work well.

This offer holds good only for the month of April, so the youthful hunters must get busy early in the game to win the premiums offered. Every fly killed now is a sturdy pioneer of the horrid pest that will follow. A fly has survived the winter and is a sturdy chap ready for his work.

To kill him now means comfort during the summer months.

This same method was tried in Cleveland two years ago and the ladies who backed the movement were almost swamped during the month by counting the dead flies and paying the bounty. The second year, however, there were few flies left, as the killing kept all summer and Cleveland was one of the worst enemies of good health there and one pair will furnish the community with millions of progeny during a single summer.

Remember ten cents per hundred delivered at the children's room at the city library next Saturday morning and start swatting at once. These warm days will bring the victims out and the winter hiding places, so watch out and start your harvest at once. Swat the fly.

Adjoin Case Against Lulu James Until Thursday the 23rd, When Trial Will Be Held.

Hugo Trebs pleading not guilty to the charge of distributing intoxicating liquor on section day when he was in the municipal court, and the case was adjourned by Judge Maxfield until Thursday to enable Trebs to secure legal advice.

Charged by Officer Champlin this morning that there was a warrant for him, and Trebs reported to Chief Ransom. The charge preferred against him was the result of finding five cases of beer on April seventh, election day, in his upholstery shop in North Franklin street. He was released under the custody of the arresting officer, as the offense is only covered by a small fine.

This morning City Attorney Dougherty asked for an adjournment of the trial of Lulu James, held for violating the city ordinance of running a disorderly house, and Judge Maxfield set the case for Thursday, the twenty-third.

Maxfield adjourned the case of John Maxwell, charged with drunkenness, for two weeks, on the report he had been working and had kept sober. Maxwell was arrested several weeks ago with five other men, when he had started the Northwestern bank car, and Maxwell was the only one who pleaded not guilty at that time. His case was adjourned on the condition that he give the authorities no trouble and that he report in regular intervals to the court.

Thomas McVay, a transient arrested in Evansville Sunday morning for creating a disturbance at the Commercial hotel, was sentenced by Judge Maxfield this morning on the charge of drunkenness. McVay was brought to Janesville this morning by Fred Gilman, and on court day admitted he had started to convince guests at the Evansville hotel that he was a "bad man" from the west and struck R. L. Emmons, clerk at the hotel, who is eighty-seven years of age. After a severe laceration he was given the long term under the commitment law by Judge Maxfield.

LIKE A PAIR OF CORSETS

A Life-saving Device for Which Some Advantages Are Claimed.

Life-preservers of the older forms have developed some shortcomings which have evoked the observation that they kill as many as they save for the reason that they are not properly adjusted, so that as soon as the water reaches the water he turns upside-down and, being unable to regain his equilibrium, is drowned with a life-preserver around his body. This is because the buoyancy has been placed too low. The best are held out of the water and the head is below it. This life-saver is of the inflatable kind, but in shape it is radically different from older forms. The wider portion is at the top and the narrower opening at the bottom, fitting snugly around the neck, permitting the device to be adjusted, only in the proper way about the body, so that when the wearer is in the water the head will necessarily be above the surface.

SEARCH LIGHT ON THE GUN

Concentrated Ray Which Indicates Exact Spot Where Bullet Will Hit. With the recent perfection of the electric search light of the post variety a great convenience has been conferred on mankind in many directions. The latest adaptation of this device is covered by a patent granted for the combination of one of these lights on a gun so that the weapon may be made use of at night just as readily as in the day time when the light is placed on the target and the beam or source of light, whatever it may be, is directed at the target.

SEARCHLIGHT ON THE GUN.

Of making a powerfully concentrated light by which it is possible to make a sweeping survey of the surroundings. Once the object being searched for is located it is only necessary to point the light on a visible spot and pull the trigger for the light is so set on the gun so that the beam will pass through the center of the circle of light. It is not necessary to aim the gun in the ordinary way for the beam or charge from the gun will follow the ray of light.

Advocates of free tolls, the president would have been justified in the position which he took by the changed conditions which confronted him. A platform is a pledge and is binding upon an official as the command of a military officer is upon a subordinate. The statement cannot be made stronger, but the subordinate officer is sometimes compelled to act upon his judgment where a change of which the commanding officer is not aware has taken place in the conditions. It is not only the right of the subordinate to judge the situation for himself where conditions have changed since the order was given, but it is his duty to do so. In the present case the president's statement takes responsibility for an official act which he regards as necessary for his country's welfare, and the people must decide whether or not he is justified and those who refuse to act with him also assume responsibility and they, too, must abide the judgment of the public. The change has taken place since the Baltimore platform was adopted. The democrats in convention assembled were confronted by the condition which now exists and had they known what those now know who ever have been placed in the platform. The convention's attention was not even brought to the fact that a majority of the democrats in the free toll measure and that it had in fact been passed by a combination of a minority of the democrats and a majority of the republicans.

Mr. Bryan says that platform planks dealing with international questions must be accepted with understanding that we act jointly with other nations in international affairs that even if the plank had not been contracted by another plank in the platform and even if it had not concealed a subsidy policy repugnant to democratic principle and history, that even if conditions had not changed, a platform plank should be taken on international questions "as the expression of a wish rather than as the expression of a determination for no nation can afford to purchase a small advantage in the face of a universal protest."

"If a nation," continued the secretary, "desires to array itself against the world, it should be sure that the thing which it is to gain is worth what it costs. The president, knowing that every commercial nation except our own construes the treaty as a pledge of equal treatment, would have been recreant to his trust had he failed to point out to the American people that our diplomatic relations would be seriously disturbed by the carrying out of the free tolls policy."
Considering the repeal measure upon its merits, Mr. Bryan said there were just two questions to be decided.

The clerk said that she would have to get the doctor to order it. The lady thinking this merely an evasion, pulled a revolver from her muff and threatened to shoot unless her orders were complied with. After some parley she was finally convinced that it was really necessary to secure a prescription from a doctor before she could procure the liquor, and consequently she went home.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

QUARRELS AS SAFETY VALVES.

IT IS SAD to think that we cannot live with those we love without an occasional roar of thunder to mar the calm and peace of our relations. But domestic storms that now and then descend upon us are a terrible thing to me, but John and I can't seem to get along without quarrelling once in a while, and a young bride confided to me the other day, "I love him very dearly and I think he loves me, but it seems as if we were simply fated to quarrel once in so often. Then everything clears up so nice, and we get along better than ever for a while, but oh I dread the next quarrel!"

Now John and his bride are both strongly individualistic. He has his own ideas; she is not the clinging type of woman. At times they argue over matters of opinion as strongly and as heatedly as two men might.

Again, it happens that John's bride is quite familiar with the details of his business. He often asks her advice about this or that. Sometimes he is pleased, other times her ideas clash with his. Both defend their beliefs.

The point is that at times they are two forces which clash. The same thing happens in nature over and over again. Then there is a storm, nature's safety valve, and fine weather for another spell.

The little storms that mar our domestic life are, after all, just safety valves. We have our days of storm breeding, a period when the air seems charged, and then, the storm. After that we have fine weather again.

It might be better if we could avoid the storms but if we can't it is folly to dread them.

When nature smiles, we forget the storm and enjoy ourselves to the utmost. We do not say "This is a fine day, but how I dread the storm that will come day after tomorrow or next week sometime." That would be very foolish.

It is doubtful if we would even consent to the abolition of all storms. A man who is never hungry can never enjoy a fine appetite; a man who has never seen a storm cannot half appreciate good weather. It may be that our domestic storms are just another arrangement of beneficent nature to make us appreciate the long stretches of really fine weather in between.

Heart and Home Problems

BY MISS ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man of twenty-four, have been going with a young woman of nineteen for over two years. We are engaged, but my folks will not hear of my marrying her on account of her mother having a bad reputation.

I have found this young woman an every thing that a young woman should be. I love her very much. Is she to blame for what her mother has done? Or should she inherit such a thing? I cannot give her up. She would leave home with me.

Could find a place for her—one I know is a good place.

Would this be right for me to do when I know her home is not what it should be? What shall I do?

TED.

You are old enough to marry without your parents' consent. If you are able to support a wife and if you are satisfied that she is a good girl, marry her and take her away from her mother's influence. She is probably so disgusted with her mother's actions that she is a better girl because of it. I do not think such things are inherited. If you cannot afford to marry now, help the girl to work with which she can support herself and to find a respectable place to live. Do not offer to pay any of her expenses, however.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is there any harm to let your fourth cousin kiss you?

(2) There is a boy of my same age that I think a good deal of. How can I make him like me?

(3) Is there any harm to let a boy kiss you good night?

SWEET SIXTEEN.

(1) I don't think I'd let him use his cousinship as an excuse very often.

(2) By not running after him, in the first place. Just be pleasant, show yourself interested in the things he likes, dress modestly and becomingly and let him see that you value his good opinion.

(3) I think there is a good deal of harm in it, my dear. You are old

Miss Rosebud English.

Miss Rosebud English, the Georgia woman who married A. D. She has secured a divorce from James, and the question arises, is she still the wife of Oliver? She was only fifteen years old when she married Oliver, who told her he was worth $5,000,000. He was a poor man.

Women Worth While

MRS. CHARLES F. JOHNSON.

By Sylene Armstrong Harmon.

Mrs. Charles F. Johnson, wife of Senator Johnson of Maine, is one of the few women who does not permit the social demands of a season in Washington to interfere with her enjoyment of birds and trees. Like Mrs. Edwin F. Sweet, wife of the assistant secretary of commerce, Mrs. Johnson knows the little worn botany of school days from cover to cover. Like Mrs. Sweet, also, she knows a great deal more than is contained in the well-thumbed pages of this old text book on botany, for during twenty-five years or more of intimate acquaintance with outdoor life, she has learned many nature truths for herself.

At Mrs. Johnson's summer home at Belgrade Lakes in Maine she and Senator Johnson have for years played hosts to their friends of the feathered tribes. Food and drink for the birds are put daily in the trees on their place, and are every day consumed with evident relish by the school guests. Mrs. Johnson knows all the birds and wild flowers of her home state, and during the three years that she has spent in Washington, since her husband was elected to the senate, she has been a constant contributor to the success of the American Revolution. She herself has been an enthusiastic and ardent worker for all sorts of patriotic causes for the past fifteen years, and also a member of the D. A. R. organization for that length of time. She was one of the early regents of the Silence Howard Hayden chapter, D. A. R., in her home town of Waterville, Maine, and two years ago she was made one of the vice presidents general of the national organization. At present, Mrs. Johnson is a member of the D. A. R., international peace committee, the committee on the celebration of the treaty of Ghent and the Continental hall and conservation committees. At the coming national convention to be held at Continental hall during the present month the Maine delegation of Daughters will present her name for re-election to the office of vice president general.

"It is appalling to think," says Mrs. Johnson, "what a meager knowledge of American history many of the younger generation have. I suppose they learn the dates and names of Revolutionary war battles when they are at school, but these can mean nothing very vital to them, else they would not be forgotten so soon. If every American mother presented to her child in a vivid and picturesque way the story of the founding of the American republic, if she made Washington, Jefferson, Hamilton, Webster, Clay and other statesmen real heroes to her boy and girl, instead of so many names she would endow her children with a priceless heritage. The Daughters of the Revolution have done a great work in founding also the Children of the Revolution, but every American mother should feel it part of her duty of motherhood to teach her child American history."

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To remove coffee or tea spots from table linen, rub the spots with glycerine, let stand thirty minutes then wash the usual way.

Grind up left-over meat, roll together with beaten egg, form into cakes, cover with biscuit dough, steam twenty minutes and serve with tomato sauce. Make a palatable and economical dinner dish.

It is best not to have carpet on the bedroom floor; use rugs instead. These can be easily cleaned.

When shutting up a house for a long time, pack the silver in dry flour and keep the forks, knives and spoons together, arranging in layers with flour between. The silver will remain perfectly bright and un tarnished.

THE TABLE.

Baked Creamed Codfish.—Clean the tail of a cod, boil it in salted water, adding a sprig of parsley. When it is cooked, drain and wipe it; then open down the back, take out the bones and separate the meat into pieces. Place them in layers in a dish, and between the layers a little bechamel sauce thinned with cream, a small piece of butter, and a little nutmeg. Sprinkle the top with a few crumbs, and set in the oven to brown.

Care must be taken that the fat is not too hot, as the potatoes must be cooked as well as browned.

Macedoine Salad.—Marinate separately cold cooked cauliflower, peas, carrots cut in small cubes, and outer stalks of celery finely cut. Arrange the peas and carrots in alternate piles in the center of the salad dish. Pile the cauliflower on the top. Arrange the celery in four piles at equal distances. At the top of each pile place a small gherkin cut lengthwise in very thin slices, beginning at the blossom end and cutting nearly to the stem end. Open slices to represent a fan. Place between a pile of celery a slice of tomato.

French Soup.—Put four pounds of meat into a stock pot with three quarts of water, set over slow fire and let it boil gently, carefully skimming off scum that will rise to the top. Pour in a teacupful of cold water to help the scum to rise. When no more scum rises, add three small sliced carrots, three medium-sized onions, two cut-up turnips, one head of celery, one bunch of thyme, one bay leaf, a little parsley tied together and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Let all boil gently for two hours. If necessary, add more water.

Horseradish Sauce.—Take a piece of butter the size of an egg, beat it up with one-half tablespoonful of flour, thin it with one cupful of warm broth or hot milk, place it on the fire to boil, stirring it all the time; stir in two tablespoonfuls of grated horseradish, let it heat, but not boil; add a little salt and serve.

Onion Porridge.—Peel a large Spanish onion, divide it into four

TRIUMPH OF CHRIST IS EASTER MESSAGE

REV. J. C. HAZEN TELLS OF OBSTACLES REMOVED BY CHRISTIANITY'S POWER.

SIR KNIGHTS ATTEND

Members of Janesville Commandery No. 2 Knights Templar and Ladies of the Eastern Star lodge were guests at the morning service at the Baptist church on Easter Sunday.

The Knights Templar service and ritual for Easter day was read with Grand Commander Alexander E. Matheson as prelate, and the Easter sermon by the Rev. Joseph Chalmers Hazen was of special significance to the members of the order.

Mr. Hazen's sermon subject was "The Stone Rolled Away." He emphasized the triumph of Christ in the resurrection, which was the last and greatest obstacle which came in the way of his earthly career. In the rolling away of the stone from the tomb Christ conquered death and gave mankind the heritage of assurance of eternal life.

"The last week of Christ's life was

"There are real guarantees, also talk imitations"

There are a lot of guarantees offered on r. o'ings. Most of them are by irresponsible people, or merely conversational guarantees. It's a very important thing in a guarantee that there should be responsibility, and that it should be in writing.

Certain-teed

Quality Roofing Durability

Since we have been giving a regular written guarantee on Certain-teed Roofing, one class of competitors has been saying that their roofing "will generally last twenty years, or longer." They don't guarantee it, however, at all. It's very easy to talk, talk, talk and say any number of years in such talk, but responsible concerns must know all about their roofing if they do any more than talk—they must know their roofings really do last when they sign a printed guarantee of plain requirements that the roofing shall make good. Of course, the irresponsible type—those who are likely to go out of business soon—can sign anything. It's very important that the buyer should not be caught in such a trifling manner.

Another very important thing is, these talk guarantees are offered on the cheapest goods the manufacturers make; not being real guarantees, there is no risk. They say nothing about their highest priced brands and qualities—just offer the cheapest thing they have—offer a talk guarantee on cheap goods equal to the real guarantee given on Certain-teed Roofing. It's funny how many people they catch on such things!

When you buy a piece of roofing you should know—and know in writing—that it is the best quality—best brand goods made by that manufacturer. Remember—make him put this in writing, that it is his best in every way, and then have the guarantee in writing and properly signed, too.

It pays to be careful in buying goods where the quality could not be judged by the sample—where everything must depend upon the standing and ability of the manufacturer to make good over a long period of years in the future.

the darkest in the history of Christianity," said Mr. Hazen. "The trials of passion week were the hardest and most severe and it seemed that the constructive work of Christ's life was about to be destroyed."

After the agony on the cross Christ's body was taken down and hastily placed in the tomb just at sundown, the beginning of the Jewish Sabbath. It was placed in the sepulchre without special preparation and almost immediately after His death occurred. The next day was the Sabbath, and early on the morning of the day following two friends of Jesus whose love and devotion had survived the test of death, the greatest test for love, went to the tomb to fitly prepare Christ's body for its final burial. And as these two women went along they talked together, wondering who would roll away for them the stone from the door of the tomb. But when they arrived the stone was rolled away, and they learned of the resurrection.

In the rolling away of the stone Christ achieved his last great victory, said Mr. Hazen. Throughout his life he had encountered the hardest trials, the most severe difficulties. He had come to a people who were as cold and heartless as the stones which surrounded everywhere in that country. The roads and streets were literally lined with beggars and afflicted and diseased persons; the prisons were filled with criminals who were bound and scourged; and there was no one who would be ready to give aid or succor, who would offer a hand to comfort or to assuage. Christ was about the only man in all Palestine who would stop to notice the lame and the blind, who would have anything to do with the fallen woman at the well, who would devote His life to uplifting humanity, steeped in its helpless sin and selfishness.

But Christ persisted and persevered in His work of transforming humanity, continued the speaker until today our blind are cared for in the beautiful institution on the hillside by the river, until now our prisoners are cared for and reformed through our charities, laws and Christianity's transforming influence is felt everywhere in the civilized world.

In addressing the Sir Knights and ladies of the Star of Bethlehem Rev. Hazen said that his fellowship in the order of knights had meant much in his life. He had been impressed with the great democracy and brotherly feeling which drew together in the order men of every walk in life. He believed that it had been the idea of the founders of the order to bring together men of all types to bring to the world a better type of Christianity, helping each one by that brotherly communion which is so inspiring and building a type of Christendom which is the strength of the nation.

The Templar service is beautiful and impressive and was an inspiration to the congregation as well as to the knights. Mr. Hazen extended an invitation to the order to take part in the Baptist church services next Easter day and also invited Grand Commander Matheson to deliver the address.

HOW CANADIAN PACIFIC PROMOTES ITS WORKERS

It may be of interest to local railway employees to know the system by which the Canadian Pacific will promote its men in the future. Where there are no more vacancies in any one corporation it is often difficult to seek out the man who is the most capable when a vacancy occurs. To offset the possibility of favoritism being shown through ignorance of any man's capabilities, the company will require all superiors to give a detailed report of the character and habits of each man in its employ. Besides these reports, an investigator will travel about incognito and look for "surprise" indications of men's fitness for promotion. Courtesy to the public, accuracy in detail, quickness in handling matters, will all be regarded. This plan is even now being tried by many of the roads, but its adoption over an entire system will be a step toward greater efficiency in that men will have a definite aim to work toward.

HOW THE CANAL WAS BUILT

The story of how the Panama Canal was built has been thus epitomized: "In other words, Colonel Goethals took that golden rule of all great soldiers, 'get there first with the most men,' and adapted it to read 'dig the most dirt with the least money.' He has a fine mind and three things: Safe construction, rapid progress, and low costs. On these three foundation stones, in his mind, was reared the structure that stands as the highest example of engineering achievement."

The March of Science and Invention

A man is searching for something how evaded our vigilance and watchful, tough, courteous, and obliging butler and entered our sanctum, sanctuary the other day for the purpose of interesting us in a whip socket for automobiles.

The contrivance is of his own invention and serves as an ornament as well as having its useful qualifications. When not used for the whip it is used for cigar ashes or it makes a good place to keep a bouquet of beautiful flowers.

It is believed this is the only automobile appliance that does not cost money to run. Most of the appliances are useless, much power that there isn't any power left to run the car itself, but this whip socket does not. It looked to us like a good thing, but we were unable to buy any stock in the enterprise, as we had just spent our last pocket money for a hundred shares of stock in a company that is getting a right of way for a wireless telegraph line between New York and Philadelphia.

A man never appreciated how science and invention are marching onward until a rich uncle dies and leaves him a glue factory. He seems as though the opportunities for investment are limitless. The master brains of this country are working while we of the timid sombre type are asleep. They are inventing left-hand monkey wrenches, patent can openers, that can also be used as an automobile jack, and folded up and carried in the vest pocket. Unbreakable window glass, noiseless cumbars.

It seems as though men can invent almost anything nowadays excepting excuses for the sick and their wives believe. Let the good work go on and sometime, perhaps, even that will be accomplished.

Schlitz Brown Bottle Claims Authenticated

by Dr. Robert Wahl, President of the Wahl-Henius Institute of Fermentology. We reprint from his letter.

"Our observations, extending over the last twenty-five years, have convinced us beyond a doubt that exposure of beer to light has a very detrimental influence on its quality generally, but especially upon the flavor of the beer.

We have tested beers repeatedly in this direction, placing the bottles into direct sunlight, and testing the same after one, two, three and five minutes exposure, found that the beer with three and five minutes exposure became undrinkable, on account of the peculiar odor developed.

The detrimental effect of light upon beer can be successfully counteracted by the employment of brown or dark colored glass bottles, and such bottles are therefore recommendable."

He quotes famous authorities to corroborate his opinion

Authorities on the subject of the detrimental influence of light on beer are:

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Are a Harmless Substitute.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets. These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

AFTER SICKNESS

Mrs. Gardner Tells How to Restore One's Strength.

So many people are asking how to recover their strength after severe sickness that we are publishing this information for their benefit.

After grippe, pleurisy, pneumonia or any illness what you need is new strength and better blood.

The most certain way to get this is by taking Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation.

Mrs. M. T. Gardner, Chicago, Ill., says: "After a very serious operation I was a total invalid for nearly a year and a convalescent for months thereafter. I gave the remedies of a number of eminent specialists a thorough trial, but without deriving the slightest benefit. Vinol was recommended. Without the least faith in the merits of the medicine, I took it faithfully, and it seemed to bring back the old color to my cheeks and the elasticity to my step which I had despaired of ever recovering. I can say, conscientiously, that for nervous, run-down people, Vinol is an excellent remedy."

Try a bottle of Vinol. Your money will be returned if it does not restore your vitality and strength. Smith Drug Co., Druggists, Janesville, Wis. P. S. If you have Eczema try our Saxo Salve. We guarantee it.

The Valiants of Virginia

He looked about him; as far as he could see the trees reared, hardy and perfect, untouched for a generation. He selected one of medium size and pulling a creeper, measured its circumference and gaging this measure with his eye, made a penciled calculation on the back of an envelope. "Great Scott!" he said jubilantly to the dog, "that would cut enough to walnut!" the Damory Court library and build twenty sideboards!

He sat down on a mossed boulder, breathless, his eyes sparkling. He had thought himself almost a beggar, and here in his hand was a small fortune! "Talk about engagement rings!" he muttered. "Why, a dozen of these ought to buy a whole lot!" At length he rose and climbed on, presently turning at a right-angle to bisect the strip to its boundary before he paused to rest. "I'm no timber-creeper," he said to himself as he wiped his brow, "but I calculate there are all of three hundred trees big enough to cut. Why, suppose they are worth on an average only a hundred apiece. That would make—Good lord!" he muttered, "and I've been mooning about poverty!"

The growth was smaller and sparser now and before long he came, on the hill's very crest, to the edge of a ragged clearing. It held a squalid settlement, perhaps a score of dirt-daubed cabins little better than hovels, some of them mere mud-walled lean-tos, with old roofs and window-panes of flour-sacking. Fences and outhouses there was none. Littered paths rambled aimlessly hither and thither from chip-strewn yards to starved patches of corn, under-cultivated and blighted. Over the whole place hung an indescribable atmosphere of disconsolate filth, of unredeemed squalor and filthiness.

With one hand on the dog's collar, hushing him to silence, Valiant, unseen, looked at the wretched place with a shiver. He had glimpsed many wretched purities in the slums of great cities, but this, in the open sunlight, with the clean woods about it and the sweet clear blue above, stood out with an unrelieved boldness and contrast that was doubly sinister and forbidding. He knew instantly that the tawdry corner was the community known as Hell's-Half-Acre, the place to which Shirley had made her night ride to rescue Ricker Snyder.

A quick glad realization of her courage rushed through him. On its heels came a feeling of shame that a spot like this could exist, a faint blot on such a landscape. It was on his own land! Its denizens held place by squatter sovereignty, but he was, nevertheless, their landlord. The thought bred a new sense of responsibility. Something should be done for them, too.

As he gazed, an uproar in a cabin reached a climax. A red-bearded figure in nondescript garments shot from the door and collapsed in a heap in the dirt. He got up with a dreadful oath—a jug thrown at him, grazing his temple as he did so—and shaking his fist behind him, staggered into a nearby lean-to.

Valiant turned away with a feeling almost of nausea, and plunged back down the forest hillside.

CHAPTER XX.

The Gardeners.

He saw them coming through the gate on the Red Road—the major and Shirley in a lilac muslin by his side—and strode to meet them. Behind them Ranston propelled a hand-cart filled with paper bundles from each of which protruded a bunch of flowering stems. There was a flush in Shirley's cheek as her hand lay in Valiant's. As for him, his eyes, like a wilful drunkard, returned again and again between the major's compliments, to her face.

"You have accomplished wonders."

sah! I had no idea so much could be done in such a limited time. You have certainly primped the old place up. I could almost think I was looking at Damory Court in the sixties, sah!"

"That's quite the nicest thing you could have said, Major," responded Valiant. "But it needs the flowers." He looked at Shirley with sparkling eyes. "How splendid of you to bring them! I feel like a robber."

"With our bushels of them? We shall never miss them at all. Have you set out the others?"

"I have, indeed. Every one has rooted, too. You shall see them." He led the way up the drive till they stood before the porch.

"Gad!" chuckled the major. "Who would think it had been unoccupied for three decades? At this rate, you'll soon be giving dances, sah."

"Ah," said Valiant. "That's the very thing I want to suggest. The tournament comes off next week, I understand, and it's been the custom to have a ball that night. The tourney ground is on this estate, and Damory Court is handier than the Country Club. Why wouldn't it be appropriate to hold the dance here? The ground-floor rooms are in order, and if the young people would put up with it, it would be a great pleasure to me, I assure you."

"Oh!" breathed Shirley. "That would be too wonderful!" The major seized his hand and shook it heartily. "I can answer for the committee," he said. "They'll jump at it. Why, sah, the new generation has never set eyes inside the house. It's a golden legend to them."

"Then I'll go ahead with arrangements."

He led them around the house and down the terrace of the formal garden, and here the major's enormous brogue broke forth again. "You are going to take us old folks back, sah," he said with real feeling. "This garden in its original lines was unique. It had a piquancy and a picturesqueness that, thank God, are to be restored! One can understand the owner of an estate like this having no desire to spend his life pillandering abroad. We all hope, sah, that you'll recur to the habit of your ancestors and count Damory Court home."

Valiant smiled slowly. "I don't dream of anything else," he said. "My life, as I map it out, seems to begin here. The rest doesn't count—only the years when I was little and had my father."

The major carefully adjusted his eye-glasses. His head was turned away. "Ah, yes," he said.

"The last twenty years," continued the other, "from my present viewpoint, are valuable mainly for contrast."

"As a consistent regimen of pate de foie gras," said Shirley quizzically, "makes one value bread and butter."

He shook his head at her. "As starvation makes one appreciate plenty. The next twenty years are to be here. But they hold side-trips, too. Now and then there's a jaunt back to the city."

"Contrast again?" she asked interestedly.

"Yes and no. Yes, because no one who has ever known that blazing clanging life can really understand the peace and blessedness of a place like this. No, because there are some things which are to be found only there. There are the galleries and the opera. I need a breath of them both."

"And semi-occasional longer flights, too," the major reflected. "A look-see abroad once in a blue moon. Why not?"

"Yes. For mental photographs—impressions one can't get from between broom-covers. There's an old cloister garden I know in Italy and a particular river-bank in Japan in the cherry-blossom season, and a tiny island with a Greek castle on it in the Aegean. Little colored memories for me to bring away to dream over. But always I come back here to Damory Court. For this is—home!"

They walked beneath the pergola to the lake, where Shirley gave a cry of delight at sight of its feathered population. "Where did you get them from?" she asked.

"Washington. In crates."

"That explains it," she exclaimed. "One day last week the little darkies in the village all insisted a circus was coming. They must have seen these being hauled here. They watched the whole afternoon for the elephants."

"Poor youngsters!" he said. "It's a shame to fool them. But I've had all the circus I want getting the live stock installed."

"They won't suffer," said the major. "Ricker Snyder'll get them up a three-legged show at the drop of a hat and don't he'll. Besides, there's tour-ament day coming, and they can live on that. I see you've dredged out some of the hills."

"Yes. I take my dip here every morning."

"We used to have a diving-board when we were little shavers," pursued the major. "I remember once, your father—"

He cleared his throat and stopped dead.

"Please," said John Valiant, "I—I like to hear about him."

"It was only that I struck my head on a rock on the bottom and—stayed down. The others were frightened, but he—he dove down again and again till he brought me out. It was a narrow squeak, I reckon."

A silence fell. Looking at the tall muscular form beside her, Shirley had a sudden vision of a determined little body cleaving the dark water, over and over, now rising panting for breath, now plunging again, never giving up. And she told herself that the son was the same sort. That hard set of the jaw, those firm lips, would know no flinching. He might suffer, but he would be strong.

Half unconsciously she spoke her thought aloud. "You look like your father, do you not?"

"Yes," he replied, "there's a strong likeness. I have a photograph which I'll show you sometime. But how did you know?"

"Perhaps I only guessed," she said in some confusion. To cover this she stooped by the pebbly margin and held out her hand to the bronze ducks that pushed and gobbled about her fingers. "What have you named them?" she asked.

"Nothing. You christen them."

"Very well. The light one shall be Pecklepie and the dark one Pilgrimage. I got the names from John Jasper—he was Virginia's famous negro preacher. I once heard him hold forth when he read from one of the Psalms—the one about the harp and the psalter—and he called it pecklepie."

Valiant's laugh rang out over the lake to be answered by a sudden sharp screech from the terrace, where the peacock strutted, a blaze of spangled purple and gold. They turned to see Aunt Daphne issue from the kitchen, twig-broom in hand.

"Heh!" she exclaimed. "What fo' yo' kyahin' on like er will gyaff we'n we got company, yo' triflin' ol' fan-tail, yo! Git outen heah!" She waved her weapon and the bird, with a raucous shriek of defiance, retired in a ruffled disorder. The master of Damory Court looked at Shirley. "What shall we name him?"

"I'd call him Fire-Cracker if he goes off like that," she said. And Fire-Cracker the bird was christened forthwith.

"And now," said Shirley, "let's set out the rambler."

The major had brought a rough plan, sketched from memory, of the old arrangement of the formal garden. "I'll just go over the lines of the beds with Uncle Jefferson," he proposed, "while you two potter over these roses." So Valiant and Shirley walked back up the slope beneath the pergola together.

With Ranston, puffing and blowing like a black porpoise over his creaking go-cart, they planted the rambler—crimson and pink and white—Valiant much of the time on his knees, his hands plunging deep into the black spongy earth, and Shirley with broad flat hung on the grass, her fingers separating the clinging thread-like roots and her small arched foot tamping down the soil about them. Her hair—the color of wet raw wood in the sunlight—was very near the brown head and sometimes their fingers touched over the work. "Once, as they stood up, flushed with the exercise, a great black and orange butterfly, dazed with the sun-glow, alighted on Valiant's rolled-up sleeve. He held his arm perfectly still and blew gently on the wavering pinions till it swam away. When a redbird flitted by, to his delight she whistled its call so perfectly that it wheeled in mid-flight and tilted inquiringly back toward them.

As they descended the terrace again to the pergola, he said, "There's only one thing lacking at Damory Court—a sundial."

"Then you haven't found it?" she cried delightedly. "Come and let me show you."

She led the way through the maze of beds at one side till they reached a hedge laced thickly with Virginia-creeper. He parted this leafy screen, bending back the springing fronds that thrust against the flimsy margin of her gown and threatened to spear the pink-rosed hat that cast an adorable warm tinge over her creamy face, thinking that never had the old place seen such a picture as she made, framed in the deep green.

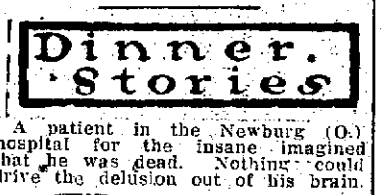

Some such thought was in the major's mind, too, as he came slowly up the terrace below. He paused to take off his hat and wipe his brow.

"With the place all fixed up this way," he sighed to himself, "I could believe it was only last week that Beauty Valiant and Southall and I were boys, loafing around this garden. And to think that now it's Valiant's son and Judith's daughter! Why, it seems like yesterday that Shirley there was only knee-high to a grasshopper—and I used to tell her her hair was that color because she ran through hell bareheaded. I'm about a thousand years old, I reckon!"

Dinner Stories

A patient in the Newburg (O.) hospital for the insane imagined that he was dead. Nothing could drive the delusion out of his brain.

"No, of course not," was the reply.

"Did you ever hear of a dead man bleeding?" continued the doctor.

"Sure I never did," answered the patient.

"Well, then—let me stick this knife into your arm. Ah! You are bleeding, aren't you? Well, then, doesn't that prove that you are not dead?"

"Now," said the patient. "You ain't much of a scientist. When you've proved is that dead men do bleed."

During a concert tour of the late Theodore Thomas and his celebrated orchestra, one of the musicians died, and the following telegram was immediately dispatched to the parents of the deceased:

"John Black died suddenly today. Advise by wire as to disposition."

In a few hours the answer was received, reading as follows:

"We are broken-hearted; his disposition was a roving one."

At Once Thought of Dad.

A lady once showed her little girl a beautiful new silk dress which had just arrived from the dressmaker, and by way of improving the occasion, she said: "You know, dear, all this was given up by a poor worm." The little girl looked puzzled for a minute or two and then said: "Do you mean dad, mamma?"
